70 YEARS FOR EVERY CHILD

'You see things, and you say why?
But I dream things that never were, and I say why not?'

James P Grant, UNICEF Executive Director
1980-1995, quoting George Bernard Shaw

The Expanded Programme on Immunization (EPI) was launched in 1974, just as the end of smallpox was within reach. In 1977, the World Health Assembly set the goal to achieve universal child immunization (UCI) against six childhood diseases by 1990.

Between 1983 and 1985, worldwide demand for vaccines tripled, resulting in a corresponding decline in vaccine-preventable deaths. In 1985, UN member states passed a resolution supporting UCI. In 2016, 86 per cent of the world's children received the required three doses of diphtheria-pertussis-tetanus containing vaccines.

The Supply Annual Report 2016 highlights the complexities and challenges of vaccine markets and procurement, and also looks to opportunities within the UN's current development framework that unifies sustainability and collaboration – inspiring UNICEF's goal to reach 19.4 million infants who still miss out on life-saving vaccines.

Supply: Fit for future

The diverse meanings of sustainability – social, economic and environmental – are central to UNICEF's global supply strategies that focus on availability, affordability and access for every child

The Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) reflect 70 years of UNICEF's commitment to children through supplies. In 2016, the impact of UNICEF Supply as an enabler towards children's health, learning, protection and inclusion was evident and wide ranging.

In 2016, UNICEF procured $3.519 billion worth of supplies and services for children. Together with partners, UNICEF delivered price reductions for vaccines and other supplies that resulted in $588.2 million in savings. In five years, the total savings for governments and partners has reached $1.656 billion.

Throughout the year, UNICEF worked with its partners to mobilise the best of strategic thinking, technical capacity and ingenuity to increase access for the realisation of children's rights to meet the SDGs, for example:

- Competition and strategic procurement approaches achieved parity in pentavalent vaccine pricing for both low and middle income countries. Vaccines at less than $1 per dose will increase access and help save 5.7 million children from dying of five preventable diseases by 2020.
- UNICEF sourced over half of its ready-to-use therapeutic food from manufacturers in countries with high concentrations of child malnutrition. This will help local health systems to expand the use of this life-saving product.

- From assessing the efficiencies of solar-driven water pumps to requiring shipping companies to report on environmental impact, UNICEF actions around procurement got greener.

This report highlights the most essential supply component of national health systems: vaccines. In seven decades of procurement, no other commodity compares in terms of scale, impact and lessons learned. In 2016, UNICEF procured vaccines reaching 45 per cent of the world's children under five years old. UNICEF's commitment to partnerships and action in vaccine research, development and availability will help secure vaccine supplies to prevent and control disease epidemics and to close gaps that still contribute to 16,000 preventable deaths among children under five years old every day.

2016 marked decisive shifts into new areas of work and new ways of working. Maximising the impact of product innovation requires healthy markets for new life-saving supplies. Building stronger, nationally-led supply chain systems requires strategic decision-making based on analyses and approaches that recognise trade-offs in speed and cost. UNICEF Supply collaborates with entire industry sectors to orient core businesses towards the needs of children.

Responding urgently to infectious disease crises, UNICEF and partner action included the procurement and delivery of one million oral cholera vaccine doses to Haiti, more than 29 million yellow fever vaccine doses to Angola and the Democratic Republic of the Congo and 191 million polio vaccine doses to Nigeria and neighbouring countries. UNICEF, partners and industry launched a systematic effort to develop a point of care diagnostic device and discover a vaccine to stop the Zika virus.

In the seemingly interminable upheavals of emergencies that have forced 50 million children to flee for their lives, supplies were fundamental to sustaining hope. UNICEF launched emergency supply responses in countries throughout the world, including five large-scale emergencies calling for UNICEF-wide mobilisation.

This report acknowledges the diverse skills and experience of UNICEF's Supply Community, united in the commitment to bring supplies to children, now and in a future where every child's life is safe and complete.

Evolving markets and changing operational contexts demand the rethinking of prevailing approaches and capitalising on new opportunities to ensure that every child can access life-saving supplies. Fit-for-future global supply strategies will help UNICEF to deliver results targeting the Sustainable Development Goals.

Supply and the Sustainable Development Goals

In 2016, UNICEF recalibrated its working vision to ensure alignment with the SDGs in realising child rights. Through reflection and analysis, UNICEF worked with partners and stakeholders to identify how UNICEF Supply will keep adjusting - to accelerate the achievement of results in new programmatic scopes, in different operating contexts, using alternative funding models.

FOCUS AREAS

Products and markets

Innovation and market influencing to make supplies accessible, affordable, appropriate in the context of climate change, urbanisation, migration, neglected infectious diseases, etc.

The science of delivery

Using supply chain analyses to inform decisions to improve value for money, speed, quality, national ownership and systems strengthening.

Domestic resource mobilisation

Strengthening domestic resource mobilisation as more countries move from donor- to self-financing their procurement of life-saving supplies.

Evidence, analysis and knowledge

Developing a more holistic approach to recording, monitoring, analysing and sharing knowledge on markets, products and services for children.

CORE SUPPLY STRATEGIES – linking supply approaches to the SDGs

Service delivery

Providing timely and responsive service delivery by ensuring value for money and expertise on products, markets and supply chains. In 2016, UNICEF procured $3.519 billion in supplies and services for programmes and Procurement Services partners.

1 2 3 4 5 6 10 12 13 17

Services

Improving management of service contracts, through better guidance, monitoring tools and reporting mechanisms. This significant area of procurement reached a value of $882 million in 2016.

1 3 4 5 6 9 17

In-country logistics

Performance-focused in-country logistics (i.e. transport, warehousing and customs clearance) and reducing risks in managing inventory in transit and in warehouses.

1 2 3 4 5 10 12 13 17

Emergency response

Meeting UNICEF's Core Commitments for Children in humanitarian action by providing supplies and expertise to ensure timely and appropriate emergency response, including for public health emergencies. In 2016, procurement with emergency funds reached $379.1 million.

1 2 3 4 5 6 9 10 11 13 17

Influencing markets

Working to positively impact market dynamics for supplies that are essential in driving down child mortality. In 2016, an expanded supplier base contributed to a more competitive pentavalent vaccine market, and a higher percentage of procurement from local suppliers.

1 2 3 4 5 6 8 9 10 12 17

Product innovation

Driving research and development of products, such as a Zika point of care diagnostic test and a rapid E. coli detection device which are not currently available on the market. In 2016, seven target product profiles (TPPs) were launched, inviting partners, industry and academia to work together to develop innovative life-saving products.

1 2 3 4 5 6 7 9 10 12 13 17

Strengthening supply chains

Reducing costs, stock-outs and wastage, through capacity development and technical assistance to governments and to local supply chains. Country-to-country knowledge exchange and standardisation of monitoring tools for countries and partners were featured in 2016.

1 2 3 4 5 6 8 9 10 12 13 17

Supply financing solutions

Ensuring that countries can procure life-saving supplies, even if funding is delayed. Bridging gaps through UNICEF's prefinancing mechanisms or finding solutions through the banking sector supports emerging middle income countries and local suppliers looking to enter the market or expand production.

1 2 3 5 8 9 10 16 17

Monitoring

Closely tracking several data points along the supply chain, while keeping the whole chain in perspective. In 2016, much was done to align the use of tools and processes across countries and between partners to better manage supply chains for results.

1 2 3 4 5 6 12 17

ENABLING STRATEGIES

Partnerships aims at becoming a better partner by ensuring a timely and collaborative approach, continuous self-reflection and placing value on contributing to shared results.

Supply community aims at ensuring the professional development and career mobility of UNICEF staff working in the supply function and fostering professional belonging and teamwork.

Working together for results aims at fostering a project management and a team approach to work.

Optimising UNICEF Supply aims at continuously improving the performance of UNICEF's supply chain and increasing efficiencies to achieve programmatic results.

Evaluation aims at examining UNICEF Supply's strategic results and supporting the implementation of results-based management.

Vaccine markets & procurement

Across seven decades, vaccine markets have evolved. In the last three, lessons learned have transformed UNICEF vaccine procurement into a strategic activity

1940s

From 1947, UNICEF supported post-war tuberculosis (TB) vaccination campaigns in Europe, reaching 16 million people with Bacillus Calmette–Guérin (BCG) vaccine through the Scandinavian Red Cross. Many vaccines (e.g. smallpox, diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus (DPT), yellow fever) were already available and mass production enabled large-scale procurement.

1950s

Public health campaigns moved to developing countries. Medicines (e.g. penicillin) became cheaper. UNICEF-procured antibiotics saved millions of people from yaws, leprosy, trachoma, etc. BCG reached 1 million children a month. In wealthy countries, inactivated polio vaccine (IPV) entered the market and other vaccines were in development.

1960s

It became clear that in developing countries, the impact of mass campaigns was not sustainable without due attention to context (e.g. trained health workers, basic infrastructure, strong governance, etc.). Vaccine procurement declined even as oral polio vaccine (OPV), and measles, mumps & rubella vaccines became available.

1970s

In 1974, WHO launched the Expanded Programme on Immunization (EPI) in developing countries. UNICEF procured measles, DPT, OPV and BCG vaccines, as well as syringes and refrigerators. The cost of EPI vaccines was low because manufacturers did not need to change their production capacity to meet demand. In 1977, the World Health Assembly set the goal to achieve Universal Child Immunization by 1990.

1980s

WHO's new prequalification (PQ) programme ensured all UN-procured vaccines were safe and effective. National Regulatory Agencies were strengthened so they could assess the quality of vaccines imported or produced by their country. Emerging economies such as India and Indonesia looked towards making prequalified vaccines. Global polio eradication was launched in 125 countries, with UNICEF leading procurement.

Using selected vaccine markets and mapping changes to supply (measured as number of doses offered to UNICEF) this illustration broadly depicts the volatility of markets and how global health policy, partnerships and procuring together, shape supply outcomes.

Over time, UNICEF vaccine procurement has evolved into a strategically planned activity that aims to ensure every child's right to safe, effective and affordable vaccines.

Number of doses offered to UNICEF (in millions)

1992–2001

UNICEF procurement was driven by price and short-term contracts.

1991

UNICEF launched the Vaccine Independence Initiative giving self-financing countries access to pooled procurement and capacity development.

1999

UNICEF held its first industry consultation which has since become an annual forum for strategic dialogue with suppliers.

2002

Vaccine security required an expanded supplier base and UNICEF awarded arrangements to multiple suppliers, accepting a range of prices. Improved demand forecasts and longer-term contract awards brought more certainty to production planning.

1999–2002

As expensive combination and conjugate vaccines became available, e.g. measles-mumps-rubella (MMR) and acellular pertussis, they were quickly adopted by countries that could afford them. Many manufacturers stopped making traditional, low-cost EPI vaccines.

2000

Gavi, the Vaccine Alliance was launched to help introduce new vaccines into the EPI schedules of the 73 poorest countries.

2001

The Measles Initiative was launched advocating increasing supply and uptake.

2007–2009

In 2007, WHO recommended introducing PCV to the EPI. To bring prices down, Gavi members established an advance market commitment (AMC) with manufacturers to provide the vaccine at a low sustainable price ($3.40-$3.50 per dose).

2010–2016

Pentavalent contains DPT plus hepatitis B (HepB) and haemophilus influenzae type B (Hib). In 2010, the first 10-dose vial was licensed, which reduced per dose prices and increased supply and uptake. It was the first vaccine introduced to all 73 Gavi countries.

2011–2020

The Global Vaccine Action Plan (GVAP) was endorsed by the 194 Member States of the World Health Assembly to achieve the Decade of Vaccines vision by delivering universal access to immunization.

2012

The Measles Initiative changed its name to the Measles & Rubella Initiative. Between 2001 and 2015, 2 billion doses of measles-containing vaccine were delivered. Measles deaths have declined by 79 per cent.

2011

UNICEF published a 10-year retrospective of its vaccine prices and began publishing prices for awards at the conclusion of each vaccine tender. Transparency increases competition between suppliers and enables governments and partners to make better informed procurement decisions. Regularly updated market analyses covering different vaccine markets have become an authoritative source for information.

2012–2013

Reduction in rotavirus vaccine pricing was influenced by a five-year supply contract when the vaccine was launched into lower income countries.

2016

On the premise that each vaccine market evolves differently, UNICEF began applying specific procurement strategies according to supply/demand analysis. Through this "Healthy Markets Framework", UNICEF decided to use multi-phased tendering which achieved a record low price for pentavalent vaccine.

2016

Four multinational companies absorbed 80 per cent of global vaccine revenue. However, there is a growing number of manufacturers in emerging economies that contributed to half of the UNICEF doses procured.

- Diphtheria-pertussis-tetanus (DPT)
- Measles-rubella (MR)
- Measles
- Pneumococcal conjugate vaccine (PCV)
- Pentavalent
- Rotavirus vaccine (RV)

Influencing vaccine markets

In 2016, UNICEF and partners applied the healthy markets framework to achieve a breakthrough pentavalent vaccine price in an already competitive market

In 2016, UNICEF collaborated with Gavi and the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation to develop the healthy markets framework (HMF) - an analytical tool to evaluate vaccine markets, and identify market influencing and procurement approaches that will achieve supply security, as well as longer-term, sustainable supply efficiency.

The HMF longer-term view takes into account a range of factors impacting child immunization programmes, for example cold chain capacity, operational requirements and other challenges. The longer-term view also considers future prospects for competition and innovation to ensure industry remains engaged around pricing and developing products that address deficiencies in the supply market.

In 2016, UNICEF used the HMF analysis to inform the procurement strategy for Gavi-funded pentavalent supply for 2017 to 2019 (450 million doses for 80 countries). Pentavalent vaccine showed many of the hallmarks of a healthy market (see box). Supply exceeded demand. UNICEF procured the vaccine from multiple suppliers in different countries, avoiding an over-dependence on limited sources. Vaccines were available in similarly-priced single-dose and multi-dose vials, enabling countries to choose the vaccine presentation that best suited their programme needs. For the 2016 pentavalent vaccine tender exercise, the HMF analysis helped to identify a multi-phased tender as the modality for maintaining a sustainable, affordable vaccine supply in an already competitive market.

Suppliers were invited to make pricing offers, contracts were awarded for the most competitive prices and these were published. UNICEF then launched a second request for proposals which gave time for suppliers to maintain or adjust their initial prices. Awards were made to six manufacturers, out of which five have R&D pipelines for six products being developed for the poorest countries. UNICEF is also following innovations around new combination vaccines that contain inactivated polio vaccine (IPV) and suppliers' adaptability to meet anticipated changes in country presentation preferences.

Competition achieved the lowest-ever weighted average price (WAP) for pentavalent vaccine to $0.84 - half of the vaccine's previous price. The new pricing is accessible to governments that self-finance their vaccine supply. For governments and donors, the pentavalent price reduction translates to $366 million in savings over 2017–2019.

FOUR TIERS OF HEALTHY VACCINE MARKETS

1. Supply meets demand

- Countries have vaccines of the right quality, in the right quantity and at prices to meet their immunization needs.

2. Supply meets country preferences

- Countries have access to vaccines in the presentation, vial, size, packaging, etc., that meets the particular requirements of a country's immunization programme.

3. Supply security

- There are enough buffer stocks available to cover unexpected shortages.
- There is no over-dependency on individual suppliers.
- There is no over-dependency on National Regulatory Agencies (NRAs) which could be the case if the majority of supply were sourced from a single country.

4. Supply efficiency

- A holistic view of the associated costs to immunize a child (e.g. cold chain, operational requirements) is taken, while safety, efficacy and ease to achieve coverage are also considered.
- The benefits of longer term competition are realised.
- The opportunity for product innovation to address deficiencies in current supply is a prime consideration.

The pentavalent vaccine market

Uneven road to affordable vaccines

Scaling up access to pneumococcal conjugate vaccine in middle income countries requires capacity development, consolidated demand, transparency and fairer prices

Pneumonia kills more than 922,000 children under five years old every year, more than any other preventable and treatable childhood disease.

The first pneumococcal polysaccharide vaccine became available in the late 1970s, followed by the discovery of the more effective conjugate vaccine. By 2010, the most advanced pneumococcal conjugate vaccines (PCVs) were available in 10- and 13-valent formulations.

WHO has recommended that all children under five be given three doses of PCV as part of their routine immunization schedule. However, nearly two-thirds of the world's children still do not have access to this vaccine. The majority of children for whom PCV is still out of reach live in middle income countries (MICs). Pricing is a significant reason why vaccines have not reached every child.

Many MICs cannot afford the PCV prices that high income countries (HICs) pay. UNICEF procures PCV using Gavi funding for as low as $3.05 a dose (see box). Since 2008, only 32 out of 94 MICs introduced PCV into their national immunization programmes.

PCV PRICE REDUCTIONS FOR LOW INCOME COUNTRIES

Partnerships and donors that support immunization have long focused on strengthening health systems and immunization coverage in low income countries (LICs). In the case of PCV, for example, Gavi members combined efforts with donor governments to launch a $1.5 billion advance market commitment (AMC) that incentivised industry to manufacture affordable PCV for phased introduction into all Gavi-supported countries.

In 2016, the weighted average price (WAP) of AMC-backed PCV dropped from $3.40 to $3.05 a dose. Since the launch of the pilot AMC in 2009, UNICEF has entered six AMC supply agreements. Between 2016 and 2020, 146 million doses per year will be procured. Between 2009 and 2016, 57 LICs introduced PCV at AMC prices, and one more had introduction pending. 15 more LICs have yet to apply to Gavi for PCV introduction.

The slow uptake of PCV across MICs led to multiple scale-up initiatives including the WHO-led MIC Task Force which supported governments in establishing evidence-based immunization policy, more equitable delivery of immunization services and increased access to affordable vaccines.

UNICEF efforts to increase transparency around supply and demand, for example by regularly publishing vaccine market updates are helping MICs and others become better informed about the pressures that influence pricing and access. In 2016, for the second consecutive year, UNICEF hosted a workshop and peer-to-peer knowledge exchange for vaccine procurement practitioners from MICs – an important complement to a growing online Vaccine Procurement Practitioners' Exchange community – which focuses on PCV, among other priority vaccines.

UNICEF is working proactively with MICs and suppliers on a 2017 PCV procurement strategy which aims to secure sustainable, affordable access.

In collaboration with partners, UNICEF has been focused on consolidating a demand forecast which would be a basis for approaching industry with a plan to increase supply at a more affordable price.

Two recent developments are promising: improved PCV availability since 2014, which can be attributed to a new PCV production facility in Europe; and alternative product presentations to achieve more affordable per dose pricing.

An estimated 61% of the world's infants (82.4 million) are not receiving PCV

Humanitarian response

UNICEF's 2016 emergency supply response reached children and families around the world. To continue to do so effectively and systematically, especially in response to epidemic disease outbreaks, UNICEF action focused on preparedness: ensuring appropriate and sufficient health supplies are in place. Planning and action also included work with partners, donors, governments and industry to close critical supply gaps in vaccines and other health supplies.

Emergencies

Nigeria: UNICEF family water and sanitation kits arrive at Maiduguri transit centre, Borno State

UNICEF described 2016 as “one of the worst years in history” for children. Around the world, prolonged conflicts, natural disasters and the search for a better life have uprooted nearly 50 million children

In 2016, UNICEF procurement with emergency funds reached $379.1 million. The supply response included 54 charter flights bringing emergency supplies, and urgent vaccine campaigns in countries including: Angola, the Central African Republic (CAR), Djibouti (for Yemen), Kenya (for South Sudan), Nigeria, Sierra Leone and Yemen.

In protracted emergencies, sourcing quality supplies locally and finding ways to ensure supplies arrive safely no matter how dangerous and difficult the journey, reflect UNICEF’s commitment to ensuring that children and families who have survived so long without peace are not forgotten.

REFUGEE AND MIGRANT CRISIS IN EUROPE

In 2016, with more than 350,000 people fleeing conflict and hardship from Syria, Afghanistan, Iraq, Nigeria, Eritrea, Guinea and other countries, the number of unaccompanied and separated children crossing the central Mediterranean doubled over 2015. UNICEF reached 95,997 refugee and migrant children stranded or seeking asylum in Greece, the former Yugoslav Republic of Macedonia, Serbia, Croatia and Slovenia with winter clothes, hygiene kits, education kits and tents. Vaccines protecting children on the move from measles, tuberculosis and pneumonia were sent to Greece.

HAITI

Some 900,000 children were affected by the destruction caused by Hurricane Matthew in October. Pre-positioned supplies (e.g. water bladders, water purification tablets, hygiene kits and mosquito nets) were ready for distribution to 10,000 people in the worst hit areas. Two transit warehouses were quickly operationalised in the worst-affected areas, Les Cayes and Jeremie. UNICEF restored cold-chain systems in 37 facilities and restored 31 treatment centres for malnutrition in the departments of South and Grand'Anse as well as two healthcare facilities in each department. Cholera and measles vaccines helped prevent further outbreaks.

ECUADOR

In April, a 7.8 magnitude earthquake struck coastal areas in north-west Ecuador, 170 kilometres northwest of Quito. More than 3,000 aftershocks were registered. At least 720,000 people were affected and 380,000 were formally included in the national humanitarian needs registry. Manabi was the worst-affected province, and the worst-hit disaster zone was difficult to access. A temporary warehouse was established in Pedernales. While some water purification tablets and calcium hypochlorite and other supplies could be procured locally, chlorine tests, water tests, filters and education kits were procured off-shore.

NIGERIA

By the summer 2016, an estimated one quarter of a million children in Borno state were facing severe malnutrition, with one in five facing death without an immediate supply intervention. Access was very difficult after a UN convoy was attacked. By September, an additional 750,000 people could be reached across conflict-affected areas, including 400,000 more children under five at risk of severe acute malnutrition. UNICEF strengthened local procurement by identifying suppliers able to manufacture quality child protection items. A 1,000 square meter warehouse was established in Maiduguri which could dispatch medicines, nutrition items, health kits and hospital supplies to all 27 Local Government Areas.

Critical supply responses 2016

SYRIA & REGION

For five years, violence and siege have cut people off from regular access to food and life-saving aid. By the end of 2016 there were 15 besieged areas where up to 700,000 people, including an estimated 300,000 children, remained trapped. Nearly five million people, including more than two million children, live in areas that are extremely difficult to reach with humanitarian assistance due to fighting, insecurity and restricted access. Bitter, unseasonable cold that swept the region increased hardship for children in the country and for the 2.5 million who fled with their families to Syria, Iraq, Jordan, Lebanon, Turkey and Egypt. Winter clothes and blankets were an important addition to UNICEF's provision of medicines and nutrition supplies, vaccines, water and sanitation supplies and education kits.

SOUTH SUDAN

Volatility and uncertainty after the collapse of the peace accord in July 2016 seriously impacted the UNICEF supply pipeline and the ability to reach the affected population with lifesaving supplies. In addition to on-the-ground logistics and supply planning support to scale up of the response strategy for the State of Northern Bahr el Ghazal, UNICEF provided $33 million in emergency supplies to South Sudan including nutrition supplies, water and sanitation equipment and vaccines.

IRAQ

As military forces advanced to retake Mosul, UNICEF established camps to receive families, and was able to pre-finance procurement of education supplies, tents, safe water access, cold chain equipment, ORS, diarrhoea kits and medicines, and provide psychological support for children. UNICEF hygiene kits, water purification tablets and jerry cans were among the supplies that reached 167,283 people, including 88,660 children.

YEMEN

Two years of ongoing conflict in Yemen have left 18.8 million people – some 70 per cent of the population – in need of humanitarian assistance. Of the 2.2 million internally displaced persons, nearly half are children. Despite intensified airstrikes and hostilities in August, UNICEF supported the vaccination of 4.8 million children against polio and nearly 182,000 were treated for severe acute malnutrition. Nearly 3 million people gained access to water through the construction, rehabilitation and operation of systems; while over 1.4 million people benefited from improved sewage and solid waste management. Hygiene kits reached 340,000 people. From UNICEF's logistics platform in Djibouti, UNICEF supported other UN agencies and international NGOs (e.g. International Medical Corps and Oxfam) in shipping cargo to the Yemeni port of Hodeidah.

Across 10 countries in Eastern and Southern Africa, one of the strongest recorded El Niño events put more than 26.5 million children at risk of malnutrition, water shortages and disease. More than 1 million children were targeted for treatment for severe acute malnutrition.

Somalia: A mother carries her child near Garowe, Puntland

Vaccines in emergencies

For children caught in emergencies immunization is a matter of survival. Vaccines are critical in responding to health crises – but enduring solutions will also require coordination and collaboration to increase routine immunization rates and strengthen health systems

Measles, a priority

Among an already weakened population living in crowded and unhygienic conditions, unvaccinated children are extremely vulnerable to measles. Measles vaccines are on UNICEF's list of priority emergency supplies. In 2016, UNICEF procured 4.2 million doses of measles, measles-rubella (MR) and measles-mumps-rubella (MMR) vaccines for children in humanitarian crisis in Chad, Greece, Lebanon, South Sudan and Syria.

Polio challenges

In 2016, a major humanitarian crisis unfolded in northeast Nigeria, where violence and destruction caused huge population displacements, left hundreds of thousands of children trapped in areas that are inaccessible to humanitarian assistance because of insecurity, and led to a dramatic increase in malnutrition. In areas previously held by militants, four children with polio were discovered. The country which had been declared polio-free only a year before, re-joined the list of endemic countries.

Nigeria and humanitarian partners responded on a massive scale. From August to December, UNICEF supplied 191 million oral polio vaccine (OPV) doses for all children under five. Distribution encompassed affected

Nigerian states, vulnerable areas of Cameroon, Chad and Niger – and expanded into the Central African Republic (CAR).

In 2016, UNICEF procured 1.2 billion OPV doses for 35 countries conducting polio campaigns towards eradication. However, insecurity was an additional challenge when conducting campaigns in some parts of polio-endemic countries. For example, in Nigeria, UN aid deliveries were temporarily suspended after a UNICEF convoy was attacked. In Pakistan, seven police officers were killed in Karachi while guarding polio workers and a polio vaccinator was shot in Jamrud. In Afghanistan, three polio health workers were killed in Kunar.

Angola: A mother and daughter attend a yellow fever immunization clinic in Ondjiva, Cunene Province. A massive emergency health response was mobilised to stop the country's worst yellow fever outbreak in 30 years

Yellow fever outbreak

Between December 2015 and July 2016, UNICEF and partners rushed more than 29 million doses of yellow fever vaccine (YFV) to respond to a major outbreak in Angola and the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC). The disease spread quickly through an urban, highly mobile population, and had to be contained through immunization.

In past years, the global emergency stockpile of six million YFV doses was enough to address an outbreak in one country. However, with Angola, DRC and Uganda all making urgent requests for the vaccine, the supply situation became critical. While UNICEF pre-financing mechanisms enabled countries to achieve timely procurement, demand exceeded supply. YFV takes a year to produce so it would take time for manufacturers to increase current stock. A programmatic solution had to be found. WHO's Strategic Advisory Group of Experts (SAGE) on Immunization reviewed and concurred with evidence demonstrating that one-fifth of a regular YFV dose would give a year's protection. 10.7 million people received immediate protection with this "dose-sparing" technique, out of a total of over 30 million vaccinated.

UNICEF also supported a WHO-led coalition to eliminate YF epidemics, and paid great attention to increasing YFV production over the longer term. By the end of 2016, manufacturers offered a record 50 million doses for procurement through UNICEF. However, supply solutions are still not enough. In countries where yellow fever vaccination coverage in routine and preventive programmes is low, populations are exposed to risk. Enduring solutions will require government-led efforts, supported by UNICEF and other health partners to achieve and sustain a high level of routine immunization coverage.

Cholera crisis

Since Haiti's 2010 earthquake, some 10,000 Haitians have died from cholera. After Hurricane Matthew hit in October, the UN's Global Task Force for Cholera Control (GTCC) approved the Government's request for an accelerated preventive campaign. In November, UNICEF airlifted one million doses of Gavi-funded oral cholera vaccine (OCV) to Haiti.

Some 90 per cent of people in the two worst-affected departments were reached.

Around the world, between 1.4 and 4.3 million people contract cholera every year. In January 2016, WHO announced that the global supply of OCV would double after the approval of a third manufacturer. In 2016, UNICEF procured nearly 2.8 million OCV doses. 1.6 million doses supported responses in DRC, Mozambique, South Sudan and Zambia. The rest went to Haiti and Malawi.

In cholera-endemic countries, UNICEF also works with governments and partners to improve access to safe water supply, water quality monitoring, hygiene and sanitation.

Supply preparedness for health emergencies

In 2016, UNICEF reinforced its capacity to better respond systematically to infectious disease crises. This supply chain strengthening effort is part of the UNICEF-wide Health Emergency Preparedness Initiative (HEPI) launched in 2015.

integrate 70 additional health-related supply items into an updated UNICEF emergency supply list (ESL). UNICEF is responsible for keeping these items stockpiled at all times, either at its global humanitarian warehouse in Copenhagen or through long term arrangements with suppliers. Before the end of 2016, the procurement and warehousing of these additional HEPI products on the revised ESL was completed.

UNICEF product and programme experts worked with a range of partners, including WHO, Centers for Disease Control (CDC) and USAID to identify supply items needed to contain and stop infectious disease outbreaks. A quantification tool was developed, modelling the volume of supplies needed to respond to specific outbreaks affecting projected populations.

Intensive work got underway to launch 10 HEPI-related tenders and

TOP PRIORITY INFECTIOUS DISEASES

Health emergency preparedness activities focused on potential outbreaks that would have the greatest impact on children and carry a likelihood of reaching pandemic proportions. Other criteria, such as the disease's fatality rate, mode of transmission and the capacity of vulnerable countries to respond are also considered. Top priorities are:

- Viral disease causing haemorrhagic fevers: Ebola, Marburg
- Acute respiratory diseases: MERS, SARS and coronavirus
- Mosquito-borne infections: Zika, dengue, chikungunya, yellow fever, malaria
- Cholera, measles, meningitis, polio

Accelerating R&D for health supplies

Not all HEPI products are readily available for UNICEF to procure and stockpile. While the Zika virus outbreak persisted in 2016, there was no point of care (POC) diagnostic test and no licensed vaccine on the market. Partnership between BARDA, PAHO, UNICEF, USAID, WHO and others is driving the development of such products.

In 2016, UNICEF convened 34 experts from vaccine and diagnostic companies, focusing partners and donors on product need and timelines for the development of POC diagnostic tests and vaccines. The status of R&D and how UNICEF helps overcome bottlenecks were also discussed. The Zika industry consultation provided insights in revising target product profiles (TPPs) for a POC diagnostic test and vaccine which were published later in the year. TPPs describe the desired performance of products not yet commercially available. For the POC diagnostic device, UNICEF also designed an advance purchase commitment (APC) of $10 million, funded by USAID, aimed at encouraging manufacturers' investment in developing a POC diagnostic device.

A global plan to speed up disease outbreak vaccines

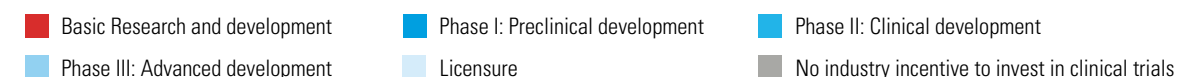

While a promising Ebola vaccine had undergone pre-clinical trials in 2005, it did not advance until ten years later when the disease's threat was felt globally.

International health organizations, industry and donors united to ensure clinical trials were completed within months. In December 2016, WHO confirmed that a 100 per cent effective Ebola vaccine had been found.

However, developing a vaccine after an outbreak is detected is just too late.

A better system to have safe, effective vaccines in place to prevent and control outbreaks became the core mandate of the Coalition for Epidemic Preparedness Innovations (CEPI), a partnership of stakeholders from the humanitarian community, governments, industry, public and philanthropic R&D funders, academia and civil society organizations.

In 2016, UNICEF shared its perspectives as part of a CEPI working group on the procurement and stockpiling of epidemic vaccines. UNICEF's experience in product innovation also provided insights into the complex issue of intellectual property management for non-commercial pharmaceutical R&D. UNICEF is also providing advice in the development of a contracting template to use with product developers in CEPI's first Call for Proposals.

Working together

Provision of supplies, and achieving procurement savings and value for money are possible only through strong partnerships and collaboration. Commitment and expertise across UNICEF's humanitarian partners and stakeholders helped ensure that countries are on track towards global achievements such as polio eradication. Within UNICEF, the diversity, experience and knowledge of colleagues in the Supply Community continue to be the organization's foundational strength in supporting country programmes to meet supply objectives for every child.

The OPV switch

Protecting polio eradication gains while minimising risks required planning and coordination across Global Polio Eradication Initiative (GPEI) partners, governments and manufacturers

Since 1988, routine immunization and vaccination campaigns have reduced polio cases by more than 99 per cent. Of the three naturally occurring (or “wild”) poliovirus types (1, 2, and 3 WPV), type 2 was last seen in 1999 and certified eradicated in 2015. This achievement was a result of protection provided by the trivalent oral polio vaccine (tOPV) targeting all three WPV strains. In 2005, GPEI started introducing more potent bivalent and monovalent OPV (bOPV and mOPV) targeting the 1 and 3 WPV serotypes.

OPV contains weakened live viruses that multiply in the digestive system. On rare occasions, through prolonged replication in an individual or in a community, the weakened live vaccine virus may reacquire the ability to cause polio. Communities without basic sanitation are most vulnerable to these rare vaccine derived polio virus (VDPV) outbreaks. The type 2 virus in tOPV has been the main cause (93 per cent).

In 2013, GPEI launched its six-year “Endgame Plan” which set out the strategy for the phased withdrawal of OPV. In the first phase, all tOPV stocks would be withdrawn from every health facility, and replaced with bOPV.

The switch was accomplished during a two-week period in April 2016. It took two years of advance planning and coordination across partners, technical experts, countries and the vaccine industry. In a synchronised manner, 155 countries and territories withdrew tOPV and rolled out bOPV for introduction in routine programmes and campaigns. UNICEF procures polio vaccine for campaigns in 50 countries, and for routine immunization in 70 countries.

A main objective of the GPEI Endgame Strategy is to strengthen routine immunization programmes and withdraw all OPV. The tOPV to bOPV switch was the first phase of this goal.

In the next phase, more countries will gradually introduce inactivated polio vaccine (IPV) into their routine immunization programmes. IPV protects against all three WPV strains, but it is made with a killed virus so there is no chance of VDPV outbreaks.

When types 1 & 3 WPV are finally eradicated, all remaining OPV will be withdrawn.

THE SWITCH FROM tOPV TO bOPV

Goals

Countries have enough tOPV before April 2016 to carry out campaigns and routine immunization
Sufficient bOPV supplies arrive in countries on time

RISKS TO

- Programme targets
Demand for tOPV could increase if there were a sudden outbreak, a change in polio campaign schedules before the switch, or if the timing of the switch was delayed.
Confirmation of the April 2016 switch date would be made in October 2015, but with tOPV production lead times of 12-24 months, manufacturers would have already stopped production by then.
- Countries
Countries experiencing a funding gap due to new vaccine introduction might not be able to secure timely supply.
Logistical difficulties were anticipated if countries did not make their request until early 2016.
Regulatory processes could delay vaccine imports.
- Manufacturers
Manufacturers might feel it was too risky to produce tOPV leading up to the switch, fearing they would end up with unsold tOPV stock that would have to be destroyed at their expense.
Manufacturers might decide to exit the tOPV market too early.

Kenya: An infant is given OPV by a health worker at a UNICEF-supported clinic in Nairobi

MITIGATING ACTIONS

- GPEI partners reviewed immunization campaign plans to ensure UNICEF awarded contracts for sufficient quantities of tOPV up until the switch.
UNICEF recommended countries to undertake detailed inventories of existing stock in April 2014 and November 2015.
Epidemiological risk modelled by Centers for Disease Control, WHO, Imperial College, etc., informed on what quantity of buffer stock to be kept in case of outbreak.
- UNICEF requested all countries to place their bOPV orders by October 2015 and for payments to be made by November 2015.
UNICEF identified countries needing pre-financing and organized a total of $2.8 million for 7 countries to assure timely delivery of bOPV.
UNICEF developed monitoring tools to track countries' procurement that provided early warnings of any risk of delay.
- Contingency plans with suppliers were established: manufacturers were required to build up tOPV stocks to meet intensive immunity boosting campaigns during Q1 2015 and Q1 2016 before cessation.
UNICEF developed an algorithm for supply allocations across manufacturers to spread any demand and financial risk.
GPEI offered partial compensation for suppliers who ended up with residual stock.
Transparency was key, e.g. via industry consultations. Suppliers were kept informed on programme milestones and decision points.

Results

76 countries
bOPV supply arrived on time to 76 out of 77 countries procuring through UNICEF

18 million doses of tOPV that would have been left over as residual stock in countries, were not procured in the first place

95% of UNICEF-procured tOPV was used, leaving residual stocks of around 64 million doses across 6 manufacturers (5% of UNICEF's total tOPV procurement). GPEI offered partial compensation for suppliers who ended up with residual stock

Savings overview 2016

$588.2 million saved through partnerships and strategic procurement approaches

In 2012, through competition and strategic procurement, UNICEF projected $810 million in savings could be achieved by the end of 2017. In 2016, procurement savings across 14 supply items reached $588.2 million, bringing the cumulative savings over the previous four years to $1.656 billion – more than double the original target.

UNICEF primarily obtained savings across a range of health and shelter products (see list, page 33). Collaboration with and actions by partners, notably Gavi, the Gates Foundation and the Global Fund, were critical to achieving these results.

UNICEF used strategic procurement, price and information transparency, special contracting terms and multi-year arrangements, along with partner collaborations (e.g. joint forecasting, coordinated procurement, etc.), to provide longer-term visibility on levels of demand – which enabled suppliers to plan and scale up production, increasing the availability of affordable supplies for every child.

SAVINGS AT COUNTRY LEVEL: THE DRC EXAMPLE

Price reductions, translated into savings, have a profound impact at country level. For example, in its procurement of the items listed on page 33, the Democratic Republic of the Congo (DRC) saved $34.5 million between 2012 and 2016. The year-by-year savings are calculated by comparing the difference between current and previous prices paid.

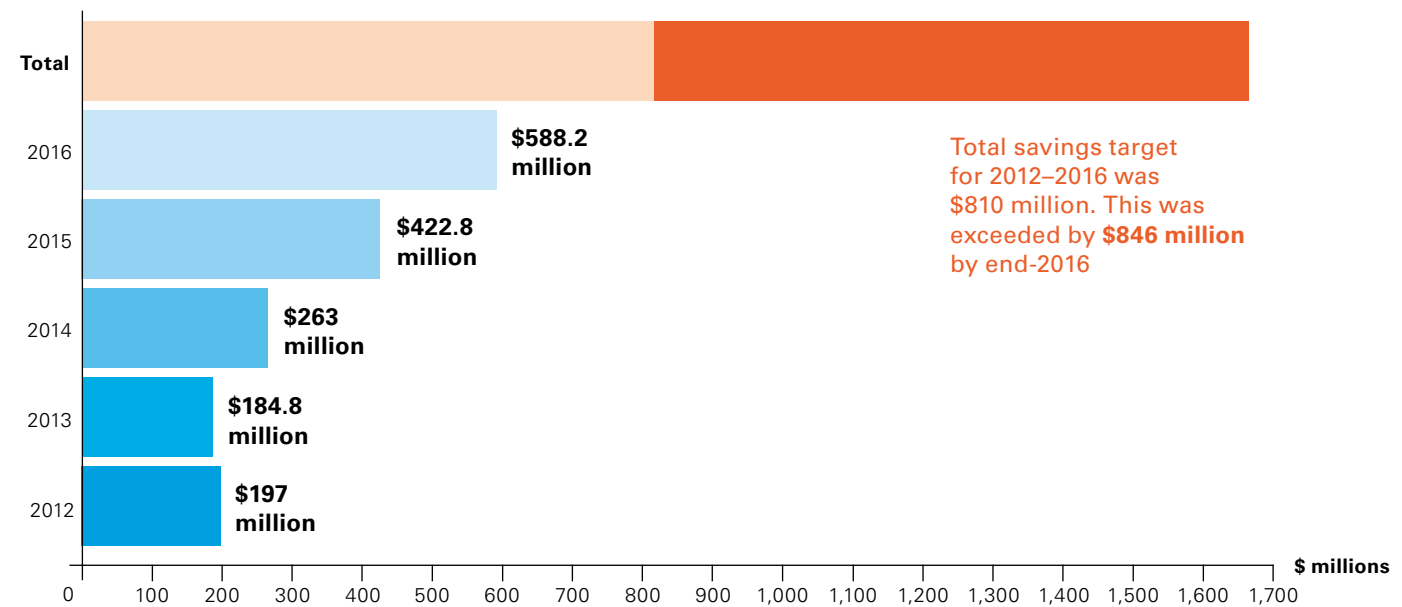

Generally, the reduced pricing would be reflected in government budgets during the planning stage of the procurement cycle. This would enable savings to be applied to other areas of government priority programming for children.

Globally, over these five years, 80 per cent of savings benefited the budgets of national governments while 20 per cent was saved by UNICEF programmes.

Collaboration

Working with partners pools knowledge and improves procurement approaches

In virtually all aspects of procurement, UNICEF collaboration with partners is critical to reaching every child with affordable, quality supplies and services. UNICEF and partners are united in the drive to be more efficient and to optimise gains around cost-effectiveness, value for money and long-term sustainability.

This illustration of procurement in collaboration is intended to show a range of procurement activities where partners coordinate, innovate and share expertise to achieve these procurement goals. This summary of examples is by no means exhaustive.

Supply chain strengthening

Well-functioning supply chains to deliver medicines, vaccines and nutrition products are critical to the provision of health services for children.

UNICEF spent $76.1 million to support in-country programmes by engaging in supply chain research and contracting services such as local transportation and warehousing. Complementing this investment in operations, UNICEF provided technical support in over 30 countries across seven supply chain fundamentals to improve both the maturity of national supply chain systems and increase national ownership.

Collaboration with governments and partners is increasing action on supply chains for life-saving nutrition supplies, such as ready-to-use therapeutic food (RUTF). In a meeting of nutrition supply chain practitioners, UNICEF brought together nutrition managers at ministry level, CEOs of central medical stores, donors and civil society organizations to agree on the Copenhagen Nutrition Supply Chain Consensus, recognising that the integration of nutrition products into the national supply chain management system is a step towards sustainable solutions.

SUPPLY CHAIN FUNDAMENTALS: EXAMPLES FROM 2016

UNICEF efforts to strengthen government capacity in supply chain management addressed different supply chain challenges within specific supply chain segments and operational contexts. In 2016, UNICEF supported government-led supply chain capacity development in 33 countries.

UPSTREAM SUPPLY CHAIN FUNCTIONS

Forecasting, procurement, budgeting and planning, international delivery

Identifies needed supplies, end-users, specific programme modalities for procurement, and required budget. Forecasting informs the purchase of the right products at the right price and quality. Transportation is then arranged to the port of entry.

DOWNSTREAM SUPPLY CHAIN FUNCTIONS

Inspection, warehousing, in-country distribution, utilisation

At the port of entry, inspections confirm the quantity and quality of supplies. In-country programmes run by the government and partners move supplies from central to district level warehouses and distribution points to the end-user via.

SUPPLY CHAIN ENABLERS

Financing

Available funding to purchase supplies, support supply chain operations, and ensure financial flows are systematically managed.

Human resources and leadership

Systems, policies and practices to organize and manage the supply chain workforce, guided by common goals, strategic direction and leadership.

System design

Optimal efficiency, effectiveness and equity within supply chains, based on current economic and political contexts and networks of government and private sector supply partners.

Policy

Operational-level rules and guidelines, including how the supply chain is managed and sustainably operated.

Data for management

The systems and procedures utilised to collect, transmit and analyse data and information for decision-making and action.

Product innovation

A successful result of product innovation is when a new supply item, previously unavailable in the market, is now helping to close gaps so that every child enjoys good health and education, and can participate fully in community life

There are three main stages in product innovation: identifying and communicating need, research & product development and scaling up.

This overview of 2016 product innovation activities explains UNICEF's work in partnership with experts from other organizations and industry. UNICEF and innovation partners work together to identify what new products children need, and how the product should be designed to function well for communities, families and other end users in low-resource settings. Finally, ground work is required to encourage countries to see the benefits of the new product and adopt it into their health or education systems.

IDENTIFYING AND COMMUNICATING NEED

- UNICEF has field-level understanding of children's needs and hands-on knowledge of the challenges and potential of country capacity.
- The expertise of partners and industry is critical in creating Target Product Profiles (TPPs), especially for health products (e.g. quality standards, regulatory requirements, price, etc.). In 2016, UNICEF published seven TPPs for a range of health, WASH, emergency and other products.
- TPPs set out for product developers the minimum desired performance a new product must meet to be useable in a country context and affordable to procure.

RESEARCH & PRODUCT DEVELOPMENT

- After a TPP is launched, UNICEF engages in non-exclusive, non-binding dialogue with product developers from the private sector and academia, keeping them informed of relevant updates (e.g. revised demand forecasts, TPPs or field trial opportunities).
- In 2016, UNICEF's industry consultations around a new Zika vaccine and a Zika POC test enabled experts to make inputs into TPPs so they were practical and actionable.

SCALING UP

- An essential part of driving R&D is to provide the appropriate incentive to invest.
- UNICEF is well placed to lead the groundwork required to ensure that the product will be quickly adopted by countries where they will have most impact.
- Scaling-up activities launched in 2016 included the preparation of field trials for ARIDA – an acronym for a new pneumonia diagnostic device. Through competitive bidding, ARIDA products meeting the TPP were selected for field trials. UNICEF's partner, the "la Caixa" Foundation, donated €5 million to support field trials and potential scaling up.
- Scaling-up activities also reassure companies there will be a return on their R&D investment. In 2016, UNICEF designed an advance procurement commitment (APC) for the Zika diagnostic test. USAID provided $10 million into the APC, enabling UNICEF to commit to placing high-value orders for a proven, fit-for-purpose product, once available.
